City passes medical marijuana ordinance

A special meeting of the Clark City Council was held Monday, June 28. The main agenda item dealt with the second reading of Temporary Ordinance #566, regarding medical cannabis.

This temporary ordinance will be identically approved by the vast majority of municipal and county governments. The State of South Dakota has until October 29, 2021 to have regulation plans in place.

This ordinance #566 was passed unanimously by the council.

Fireworks will be shot off at dusk on Sunday, July 4 at the city dumpgrounds, located next to the municipal golf course.

No burn ban was adopted or initiated at Monday's meeting. Water restrictions were put in place at the June 21 meeting and remain in place for all watering within the city limits of Clark.

Council members present Monday were Nick Dalton, Shane Hagstrom, Brandon Kottke and Derrick Dohmann along with Mayor Kerry Kline and finance officer Alaina Wellnitz. Absent were council members Andrew Zemlicka and Melissa Nesheim and city attorney Chad Fjelland.

Next regular council meeting is Wednesday, July 7.

As of September 1, 2021, Dekker Hardware will be-Pam Dekker, owner of Dekker Hardware. Not pictured is Ashley Garduno.

Dekker purchased the hardware store from H.T. come Clark Ace Hardware. New owners Altredo and Desnoyers, whose family owned the hardware Shannon Garduno and son Kason are shown with store for over 100 years. This quartet shows off the gold-plated coins, a tradition of Desnoyers, one that received near and far acclaim.

Clark Ace Hardware will open September 1, 2021

Alfredo and Shannon Garduno, Webster, have purchased Dekker Hardware from owner Pam Dekker. Clark Ace Hardware will open September 1, 2021.

The Gardunos will be only the third owners of this store in 113 years. They have owned the Webster Ace Hardware for 21 years.

Said soon to be outgoing hardware store owner Pam Dekker. "I wish good luck to Alfredo and Shannon. When Henry (Desnoyers) was the hardware store. That is how I feel. That would be you," she said to Alfredo and Shannon Garduno.

Alfredo is a third generation hardware store owner. "Hardware business is in my blood," said Alfredo and his brother's favorite story from long ago is 'that Alfredo had nails in his diaper'.

"My grandfather started a store sick, he told me that I had to save in Mexico City close to 100 years ago. My dad took over and then my brother owned the store after my dad had passed away," said Alfredo. This all happened 24 days after he bought the Webster store.

Alfredo and Shannon were work-

It is well documented how dry South Dakota has been in 2021. It is interesting, in Clark, that 2021 rain precipitation numbers are pretty comparable to 2020

That means that timely rains are more important than ever this summer. Sixty-eight hundredths of an inch of rain fell in Clark over the weekend, but to say that the rain was spotty throughout, would be an understatement.

This cornfield along N. Idaho Street at the northern edge of Clark is definitely knee-high and looks good after weekend showers.

This year, because of the excessive dryness, one wondered if the corn would be looking good like usual. This corn, surrounding the Bokinskie girls, on the north end of Clark is good looking corn at this point, over knee-high in height.

There was rain in Clark County over the weekend, but very, very spotty in nature. Clark received officially .68" of rain and 10 miles away in several directions, over an inch or more of rain was reported. The opposite is true as well as some producers, in Clark County received

Ken Bell has turned the west edge of Clark into an outdoor art museum

Ken Bell gets a kick out of it when he's out working west of town in his field of sculptures and he'll see people drive by and they take a double take or jerk their head towards the north to take a better look.

Nowadays he's out there working on covering up the big cement pieces that are to the north of the old railroad grade. They are pieces of old U.S. Highway 212 when it was replaced back in the 1980s.

A few of the pieces are stuck on end on the left side of the dugout farther back.

Some will call it old junk but for the creative minds - maybe it has potential to be artwork.

"I like to make people think," says Bell of his art in the 40 acre field on the outskirts of Clark.

"I've seen people take out lawn chairs and sit there and gaze awhile," noticed Bell.

Every mind sees things differently he continues and all maybe see something different in each piece or Even looking at each from different angles gives a different perspective. Especially for example the nine spirits or nine sisters which are telephone poles that have served their time and are now stuck down in the ground about four or five feet. From the side all are at a definite slant, but looking from the east side - they appear more straight up and down.

'Karen' and the gang

"The Parade" catches a lot of eyes with 10 matching (now, thanks to red and white paint) Ford LTD's from years 1975-1976 with the same body styles.

For those who haven't counted lately and for many it's been a game to count and see what he's up to now - the number is 10 of them. The original one named "Karen" is in the center of the pack in the middle on the left. It is named Karen after his daughter who hated that car when in high school said Bell. She would get teased for driving such a big tank of a car at the time. It was her daily driver and after being hung up in the field, it was left there. And then it got 'more friends'.

The car that came the farthest was from Kansas City, but others came from Turton, Clark, Crocker and other areas as word got around about the LTD collection in the field. The cars have been moved back three times over the years as LTD's from the mid 70s, all in red and white. On 40 acres he bought from Elwood Resick many years ago, the field has turned into a field of sculptures that amaze passers by along U.S. Highway 212 west of Clark.

Ken Bell's latest creation is just to the right of his "parade" of Ford The most recent in this photo is a train-like creation made from electrical spools and grain bin roof parts and the culvert pieces - snake in the grass - see its eyes on the bottom left?
